04/12/2023 15:06 and	ionymous	Extremely unlikely	You cancelled my appointment but failed to notify me.
	ionymous .	Extremely difficely	Late to appointment, so when I've been calling reception to see why I've not had my appointment after waiting 20 mins for a call, the nurse called me and it went to VM as I was on a call to reception. VM stated that I could ring up reception and see if she was free, if not I'd need to rebook the appointment. I rang reception and after waiting over 40 minutes got through to be told nurse not free and only thing that could be done was a message. I was audibly upset and as such I think that's the only reason I was called back.
			When the nurse rang in her break she made a point to state 'I've rang you in my break' as if that made anything at all better.
			I'm newly diagnosed with type 2 diabetes, I'm struggling in my personal life, stressed out to the max and to be told 'well being only 25 and diagnosed with type 2 isn't exactly good' (or something along those lines) was just the cherry on top of a rather awful few months. I know it's not good.
04/12/2023 15:06 and	ionymous	Extremely unlikely	That's the whole reason I've been going to the doctors to get my health in line. I feel like there's no support.

04/12/2023 15:07 and	onymous		Have had to wait over 1 hour on phone to make an appointment tried to see doctor. Told I had an appointment with a muscular specialist. Asked specifically if the nurse could prescribe meds and do referrals and said yes. Had appointment and needed pain management medication and once again the nurse was not able to do this. This is the third time I have had appointments with nurses instead of a doctor and had to see a doctor afterwards as they could not help me. Feel like you have got too many patients for the amount of doctors and constantly using nurses against the requests of patients. Not enough appointments and the telephone system is ridiculous.

			(separate issues, one head and eye issue other an ankle issue both unrelated). Last visit I think was 23rd November, and it was extremely disappointing. The ANP wouldn't give me the time of day, kept interrupting me when trying to explain, acting from the get go before I've sat down like I'm an inconvenience. Tried fobbing me off without giving any kind of diagnosis which is a common theme at your practice. Advised I was unhappy as this keeps happening, so GP came in too. They were just as ratty and huffing and puffing.
			Regards my ankle the MSK physio I saw Cathal was similarly disinterested as soon as I entered with this undiagnosed long standing issue I've had and had. Still awaiting any kind of diagnosis attempt on my ankle issues other than "do these stretches".
			I know my body and I know there is damage to the inner of my ankle specifically I would say, I just want a scan and someone who knows what they are looking at to help diagnose so I at least know where I'm at.
			Very disappointed with NHS at the moment, it's a

		I have made 6 phone calls this week and only got through to speak to somebody once. I've rung at the times recorded for the department I wanted and told by a machine nobody was available and the call ended, I then waited for over an hour for a call to be answered and nothing, I work and could not hold any longer. I then had to go to the surgery using my lunch break to speak to somebody. I'm aware the NHS is in crisis, but this level of service is not acceptable. I have not been able to request my repeat prescription which includes cancer meds as my exemption has expired and my request for completion not followed through. I can not afford to pay for the amount of medication I have to request.
		I am venting because I'm frustrated, and completed one of these forms previously, ive had no feedback, so I'm sure this won't be read either. If I acted in such a way in my job I would be put on an action plan, and rightly so. I

		When booking an appointment regarding my mental health, I expected the usual ten minute talk with a GP. So you can imagine my pleasant surprise when I was linked with a mental health specialist who spent 45 minutes with me going making a plan of action to help with what was a low point in my life. I left the practise not only feeling listened to and valued, but with a sense that things would get better. I then had a follow up appointment with the same specialist 4 weeks later. Because I was in such a better place I felt confident in taking the advice to reduce my dose (it had been increased in the last appointment with the idea it would be reduced again as it led to me being on the maximum dosage) leaving me wiggle room for the future. The specialist took a lot of time to discuss behavioural antidepressants and direct me to places that could help with my specific situation. I felt that the extra care and attention taken in the first place will ultimately prevent things escalating in the future, which would only result in patients having to use more services. I'm also confident that should my mood dip again, i could see the same specialist and have a plan of action put in place. This is definitely a step in the right direction for the provision

			Friendly & helpful front line reception I was able to get appointments booked quite easily Its just a shame the phone lines aren't faster, it's very frustrating to have 20+ people in a queue ahead of you
